

Summary of The Rockefeller University's 2023 Student Climate Survey Results

From June 21, 2023, to June 27, 2023, The Rockefeller University (“Rockefeller”) administered a student climate survey designed to assess students’ knowledge of Rockefeller’s policies and procedures addressing sex discrimination, sexual harassment, and sexual violence; student’s knowledge of services and resources offered by Rockefeller and others; and students’ personal experiences with sexual misconduct, including observing and reporting incidents of sexual misconduct.

- 285 students were invited to participate in the survey. The students were Rockefeller Ph.D. students, M.D./Ph.D. students doing their thesis work at Rockefeller, visiting students, and Clinical Scholars in Rockefeller’s Master’s Degree Program.
- 103 students (“participants”) participated in the survey, reflecting a 36% response rate.

We appreciate the participation in this survey as it allows us to capture the experiences and views of our student body. The students responded anonymously and were not required to answer all questions in order to complete the survey.

Below is a summary of the survey results, including demographic information, with response rates rounded to the nearest whole percentage. It is important to note that not all participants answered every question and that some questions allowed for multiple responses. Accordingly, not all responses will add up to 100%.

Demographic Information of Participants

Students' Personal Experiences

In the past two years as a Rockefeller student, participants reported experiencing the following:

- Unwelcome sexual remarks, jokes, or stories that were insulting or offensive to the participant made by a Rockefeller student or employee or third party (23%).
- Someone viewing their sexual activity or seeing them without clothing or taking explicit photos or recordings without the participant's consent (0%)
- Unwanted sexually suggestive digital communications, either words or images, or both, including emails, texts, social media communications, or in written format (6%).
- Inappropriate or offensive comments by a Rockefeller student, employee, or third party about the participant's or someone else's body, appearance, or sexual activities, or someone who talked to the participant about sexual matters when the participant did not want to engage in such discussion (13%).
- Repeated overtures by a Rockefeller student, employee, or third party, after the participant said "No", to ask the participant to go out, get dinner, have drinks, or have sex (5%).
- The use of physical force or threats of physical force by a Rockefeller student, employee or third party to engage the participant in sexual activity (0%).
- Felt forced to engage in sexual activity with a Rockefeller student, employee, or third party (0%).
- A Rockefeller student, employee, or third party having sexual contact with the participant without the participant's knowing voluntary and mutual agreement. For example, someone initiated sexual activity despite the participant's refusal, cues to stop or slow down, gone ahead without checking in while the participant was still deciding, or otherwise failed to obtain the participant's consent (5%).
- Received unwanted phone calls, emails, voice messages, text messages or instant messages or pictures of videos on social networking sites that made the participant afraid for their personal safety (6%).
- Someone showed up or waited for the participant when the participant did not want the person to do so in a way that made the participant afraid for their personal safety (3%).
- A spouse or romantic partner controlled or tried to control the participant. For example, kept the participant from going to classes or pursuing the participant's educational goals, not allowed the participant to see or talk with friends or family, or made decisions for the participant such as where to go or what to wear (3%).

- A spouse or romantic partner used any kind of physical force against the participant. (e.g., choked, slapped, punched, kicked, hit with something other than a fist, attacked with a weapon, or otherwise physically hurt or injured the participant) (0%).

With respect to participants who reported having personal experiences: No participants responded to questions regarding whether they contacted Rockefeller University personnel about these experiences, whether these personnel were helpful, or reasons they did not contact anyone at Rockefeller if that was the case. No participants responded to questions regarding whether they contacted any resources outside of Rockefeller, or if not, their reasons for not doing so.

Bystander Intervention

- 12% of participants reported knowing a friend who had been sexually assaulted.
- After learning that a friend had been sexually assaulted, participants reported responding in the following ways: did nothing because they didn't know what to do (9%), did nothing for another reason (27%), spoke to their friend about it (91%), spoke to someone else to seek help (9%), found resources for their friend (27%), took action another way (27%), notified a university official (0%).

- Of the respondents to the question directly above who reported seeing a person who was intoxicated or under the influence of drugs or alcohol being led to what looked like a potential sexual encounter: 100% did nothing because they weren't sure what to do. 0% of participants spoke to their friend directly, 0% spoke to someone else to seek help, 0% took action in another way, and 0% notified a university official.
- 7% of participants have seen or heard someone acting in a sexually violent or harassing way.
- After seeing or hearing someone acting in a sexually violent or harassing way, 17% did nothing because they didn't know what to do, 50% did nothing for another reason, 50% spoke to their friend, 0% took action in another way, and 0% notified a university official.

 * * We thank all students who participated in this survey. The survey results inform the Rockefeller administration about students' knowledge of Rockefeller's policies and procedures addressing sex discrimination, sexual harassment, and sexual violence; students' knowledge of Rockefeller's and external resources and services; and students' experiences with sexual misconduct, including their personal experiences and as a bystander. The survey results will be very helpful to consider in our ongoing efforts to provide outreach, education, and resources for our Rockefeller community.*
